The email will be eventually sent through, as our mattempting to deliver your message, but it may automatically appear in your recipient's Spam or Junk folder once it is through. If you are receiving a lot of these messages from one particular ISP or mail provider, you may want to consipossible for your recipient to switch to another ISP or mail provider. This may not be possible in all situations, so y accept the de-prioritising if you wish to communicate with those recipients.
